

Biennial Review of all broadcast ownership rules.

I am against increasing consolidation of media ownership on the local and national levels. The FCC needs to ensure diversity and depth of journalism in all media without censorship. These are best ensured by encouraging ownership by many smaller broadcasting companies, rather than the four or five mega corporations that have come into power over news provided to the American public since 1996. This is clearly an attempted monopoly of the airwaves, which belong to the people.
